ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Spending five years at Tilburg Law School, besides visiting University of California Los Angeles, Middlesex University and Galway University, offered me the tremendous opportunity to write this book. In this regard, I have received enthusiastic support of many people, all of whom I owe sincere gratitude.

My supervisors Marc Groenhuijsen and Anne-Marie de Brouwer: I deeply appreciate all your whole-hearted backing and sincere belief in me. I feel fortunate to have had you. Thank you for your invaluable comments and excellent advice you have given me throughout the years and for giving me the space, courage and inspiration I needed to develop my ideas and broaden my knowledge. In addition, I must thank you for all your heartfelt sympathy and support to my personal life.

My colleagues from the Tilburg University's Department of Criminal Law: you made the time I spent working on my thesis enjoyable. Due to your kindness, I looked forward to each day I worked at my offices on the 8th floor in the M building. Thank you for all your companionship.

The reading committee: Professors Kooijmans, you have been a friend rather than a boss for me at Tilburg University before and during my teaching, van Genugten, Smeulers and Dr. Bevers, I always had your great support when I did an internship at the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court under your supervision, thank you very much for providing me with your constructive and valuable feedback.

Last but not least, writing this thesis would have been impossible without the support of my parents and family. Fatemeh, you had the more difficult part throughout the years, but I did see nothing except for kind support and great encouragement. I am blessed to have you.

To the next generation, to Zeinab who owns my heart, may the world you grow up is a world without war and suffering and with peace and love. I believe we eventually see such a world.
