ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

When I was studying law in Utrecht, Mischa Wladimiroff took on some students to work for him in the defense of the first person who stood trial before the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. I am very grateful to him for giving me the opportunity to participate in this unique adventure. Above all, it inspired me to start with this study.

The subject of this thesis has changed quite a bit since 1995, due to the major developments in the field of international criminal law. A few years after I started this research on the basis of a draft Statute of the International Law Commission, the Diplomatic Conference in Rome adopted the Statute for the International Criminal Court. The conclusions of this study were finalized on the day former President Slobodan Milosević was transferred to the UN Detention Unit at The Hague. On 11 September 2001, I submitted the manuscript to be sent off to the Commission for assessment.

Despite the continuing development of case law deriving from the ad hoc Tribunals and other courts, I concluded this research on 1 September 2001. Materials appearing after this date have been considered only to the extent that they shed new light on the subject of study.

These past few years have been amazing years, though not only at world level for me. I should like to mention some of the people who contributed to this study.

Willem van Genugten, Anton van Kalmthout, and Jan Sjöcrona together wrote the research proposal to which I applied at the Faculty of Law of Tilburg University in 1995. Their confidence and support have been truly encouraging. Nico Keijzer has always been there for his students too, if need be with tea. May this not be our last joint effort; I promise to be briefer next time. Having said that, I should also like to thank Irma for her care and her cookies.

I derived great inspiration for this study from Adriaan Bos, who provided me with the opportunity of an internship. In this way I was able to attend one of the Preparatory Committee sessions on the establishment of the International Criminal Court in August 1996. Being accredited as an “expert” within the Dutch delegation – thank you, Roeland Böcker – certainly opened my eyes to the way in which “international criminal law” is actually created. Ian Guest and his On The Record-advocacy project enabled me to attend the Diplomatic Conference in 1998 and made me live in a Roman convent for once in my life.

Otto Triffterer’s writings inspired me to focus on the sources of international criminal law and the nullum crimen sine lege principle. Likewise, my visit to the Max-Planck-Institut für ausländisches und internationales Strafrecht in Freiburg in 1996 has been very useful: not only the time spent in library, but especially the discussions with Professor H.-H. Jescheck and, not in the least, the documents always discovered right on time and care provided by Bas van Riel.

I enjoyed the discussions with Frits Kalshoven, Guido den Dekker, Herman von Hebel, Richard van Elst, Göran Sluiter, Liesbeth Zegveld, Marten Zwanenburg and others, within the framework of the “Kalshoven International Humanitarian Law Research Group.” These sessions often strengthened my enthusiasm for my work: may they long continue to be held.

The Department of Criminal Law of Tilburg University still is a good place to be. Marian de Jong still keeps its troops together after all these years. Marion Brienen, Afshin Ellian, Elishewa van de Griend, Ernestine Hoegen, Piet-Hein van Kempen, François Kristen, Anna Meijknecht, and Elies van Sliedregt were not only colleagues, but also friends. With many other “AIO’s” working at Tilburg’s Law Faculty I plodded on and partied.

Marcel Felet and the Schoordijk Institute of Tilburg University have been instrumental in making life easier. Richard van Rijsbergen regularly saved my documents from miraculous disappearances, so did Rob Matthijssen. Marjolijn Verhoeven should be thanked for her capacity to avoid bureaucratic hurdles and for her (last) cigarettes. Hildegard Penn and Ineke Sijtsma turned this text into digestible English in the shortest amount of time possible: thank you so much.

Many colleagues from the Netherlands Red Cross Society were forced to be patient during the last year of working on this study. Particularly Anne Helene Borgts, Mireille Hector, and Pita Schimmelpenninck van der Oije: for their support I owe them more than one favor. They make it fun to work as a team.

Many others made an effort to distract me from my work and to put it into perspective. With Clarisse Girot I shared a house in Tilburg, work, fun, and a few teardrops: a cross-border friendship. Madeleine van Toorenborg and Theo Ermens were always there when needed with a positive spirit and help. So was my Frysian family, especially Jan and Baukje de Vries.

Ron and Tini Boot, my parents, of whom I am proud. My father’s inquisitiveness and my mother’s enthusiasm, and the perseverance and love of both have been both necessary and inspiring.

But life is really boring when Luuk is not around.
