PREFACE

During the last century, fundamental changes have taken place in the area of the law of the child. The 1990s were even known as the “decade of the child”. Whereas initially, the child was merely regarded as an object of parental claims and rights, after the middle of the last century, the role of the “interests of the child” began to take scope. This trend culminated in the enactment of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, which specifically gave children rights as autonomous individuals.

Against this background, the decision was made to conduct a session on “Tensions between legal, biological and social conceptions of parentage”, discussing the major developments in the law of parents and children, at the XVIIth Congress of the International Academy of Comparative Law, 16–22 July 2006, Utrecht, the Netherlands. This book comprises the contributions made in anticipation of this Congress. It consists of 15 National Reports from Austria, Belgium, Canada, China/Macau, Croatia, Denmark, England, Germany, Greece, Japan, the Netherlands, Romania, Serbia, Switzerland, and the USA, which formed the basis of a General Report by the editor that was presented at the Congress. The National Reports were written in response to a questionnaire that is reprinted in the annex to this book.

Many thanks go, first of all, to all the National Reporters for revising their reports for this publication. Special thanks are due to my dear colleague and friend, Professor Dr. Katharina Boele-Woelki, Utrecht, for organising the Congress, and for her willingness to include this contribution in the European Family Law series. Last but not least, I am most deeply indebted to my academic assistant, Mariel Dimsey, LL.M., Lawyer (NSW, Australia), who not only helped me extensively in preparing the General Report, but was also responsible for organising this publication. Finally, thanks go to b.sc. et cand. iur. Catherine Weibel, who assisted in formatting the reports for publication.

Preface ........................................................27
I. General questions ........................................27
  1. Are there presumptions of parentage? Do they differ according to whether the mother giving birth to the child is married or not? ........................................27
  2. Is medically assisted reproduction allowed? Who has access (married heterosexual couples, cohabiting heterosexual couples, lesbian couples, single women)? Is egg donation allowed? Are surrogacy agreements enforceable? ............28
II. Fatherhood ...............................................29
  1. How is fatherhood established? What presumptions of fatherhood exist (marriage, cohabitation, consent to medically assisted reproduction)? Fatherhood by acknowledgement (prerequisites, who must consent, case of otherwise existing presumption). ..................................29
     a. Overview .........................................29
     b. Paternity established by marriage .................30
     c. Paternity established by acknowledgment ..........31
     d. Paternity established by adjudication ..............31
  2. Challenging fatherhood. Who may challenge (presumed father, his parents/heirs, child, mother, alleged true biological father – under what circumstances –, any interested person the state)? Prerequisites for challenging, especially time limits? The special case of heterological artificial insemination; may the consenting husband/partner challenge his fatherhood; the right of the child to know its origin? .........32
